

It's called "proofreading", give it a shot why don't you devblogs.microsoft.com/oldnewthing/20040108-00

January 8, 2004

Raymond Chen

Like everybody else, I was checking out the new MSN home page and I clicked over to the tour. And right there as their top headline in the sample web page, it says, “Wierd items of the future”. Ahem. It’s spelled w-e-i-r-d. And on all of the MSN properties, like local city guides, you can see MSN’s new motto: “More Useful Everyday”. Um, another spelling error. That should read “More Useful Every Day”. When used as a single word, “everyday” is an adjective, not an adverb. Like “An everyday event”.

I’ll stick with My Yahoo, thanks the same. At least they know how to spell.

Raymond Chen

Follow

