

Dead Sea Scrolls lectures available online (or in person if you can get there)

 devblogs.microsoft.com/oldnewthing/20061018-07

October 18, 2006

Raymond Chen

As I noted last year, the Dead Sea Scrolls are in Seattle, and in conjunction with the exhibition is a series of eleven lectures at Town Hall. Tonight's lecture is The Dead Sea Scrolls, Jesus & The Da Vinci Code. These lectures are rebroadcast on The Seattle Channel, and it appears that the city also makes the video available via streaming media. It takes a few weeks for them to make it to the archive page, though. The first lecture in the series, Dead Sea Scrolls: Early Judaism and the Births of Christianity, just went up. Fascinating stuff.

Raymond Chen

Follow

