

The audacity of selling things that don't belong to you devblogs.microsoft.com/oldnewthing/20070703-01

July 3, 2007

Raymond Chen

NPR some time ago reported on a most audacious scam: Selling someone else's property out from under them. But this guy was small potatoes, selling properties owned by churches and other non-profit organizations. The king in this category of fraud is Victor Lustig, the man who sold the Eiffel Tower... twice!

Raymond Chen

Follow

