

Microspeak: Assorted babble

 devblogs.microsoft.com/oldnewthing/20080222-00

February 22, 2008

Raymond Chen

Here are some phrases I jotted down during a meeting. I don't even know what meeting it was. (They were jotted on some scratch paper.) These don't count so much as Microspeak as they do just assorted management babble.

- “inspiring sustained high performance”
- “fostering agility and resilience”
- “clarifying the journey”
- “unleashing talent”
- “a new or unanticipated experiment”

Sometimes I wish management would speak in plain English. But then the rest of us might realize that they don't know what they're talking about.

Raymond Chen

Follow

